

Donate a fair-trade rugby ball to help empower girls and promote child rights in Laos.

Sport Matters has teamed up with ChildFund Australia and Jinta Sport on a new campaign to support our work with children and youth in Laos using rugby to make a difference.

Your donated rugby ball will be used by the Lao Rugby Federation in the Nonghet district in the Xieng Khouang province in the north of Laos. Rugby is used in twelve villages in Nonghet to promote child rights, gender equality and life skills to over five a half thousand children and youth.

IN ASSOCIATION WITH:

CHILD RIGHTS MATTER
 ChildFund Australia works in partnership with children and their communities to create lasting and meaningful change by supporting long-term community development and promoting children's rights. ChildFund Australia believes that every child has the right to live free from poverty. ChildFund Australia partners with the Lao Rugby Federation and uses sport to ensure that children are protected, healthy and participating in the decisions that affect them in their communities. Rugby is having a powerful impact on women and girls in Laos as a new sport.

SPORTSUPPORT

Sport Matters is an Australian NGO that uses sport to make a positive impact on development in Australia, the Pacific, Asia & Africa. Our new SportSupport program aims to raise awareness about the power of sport to make an impact on development & generate support from Australia and around the world to meet the needs of our development partners.

WHY FAIR-TRADE?

Child labour in the sports industry is no great secret but switching to fair-trade sports equipment can ensure that you're not contributing to the exploitation of children. Jinta Sport is Australia's first fair-trade sports brand. The purchase of Jinta Sport products is guaranteed to be child labour free and that the workers involved in the production are treated with dignity and paid living wages.
